

The Amateur Radio Emergency Service (ARES) 2017 Annual Report

Based on reports submitted by ARRL Section Emergency Coordinators, with 62 out of 71 sections reporting in, here's what we know about the state of ARES in 2017.

Continuing a trend observed last year, the percentage of sections reporting ARES activity has increased. The challenge offered last year was to reach 88% reporting, we missed by just a bit, hitting the 87% mark in 2017. We received reports from several sections that did not report in the previous year – NM, OR, PR, RI, SD, VA, and WY. Unfortunately, there are still 9 sections with no reported ARES activity. Considering the importance given to the role radio amateurs play during emergencies, disasters, and routine community events, it is hard to imagine that there is no public service communications activity in these sections. However, if no reports are received, that is what we have to go by.

ARES Summary for 2017

Total ARES Membership – 31,332
Active in – 47 states and territories
Total ARES Events – 51673
Total Volunteer Hours – 718,930
Total Volunteer Value Provided - $17,354,958

There are a few interesting items we noticed with the numbers in 2017.

- There was a noticeable increase in reported activity during the months of August through November. During this period there was Amateur Radio response activity for hurricanes Harvey, Irma, and Maria; wildfires in the western states, and the total solar eclipse that occurred on August 21.

- In 2017, 26 states showed gains in ARES membership, with an average gain of 112 members; 13 states showed losses in ARES membership, with an average loss of 101 members; 8 states reported for the first time in 2017. The average for gains and losses was 32 members.
- The method for calculating Volunteer Value Provided is: multiply the total Person Hours by the latest rate for value of volunteer time. The latest value of volunteer time, as determined by the non-profit leadership and research group Independent Sector, is $24.14 per volunteer hour. This figure is a national average.
- In 2017, there were changes in the ARES report forms. These changes made it easier to process information at ARRL HQ and standardize the format for all forms. ARES Monthly Reports have also been posted to the ARRL website, providing regular information on Amateur Radio public service communications activity.
- Sections not reporting in a calendar year are considered to have no ARES program or an inactive ARES program. The following sections are non-reporting for 2017: Alaska, Montana, Northern New York, Orange, San Diego, South Carolina, Utah, Vermont, and Western Massachusetts.

So what should we expect in 2018?

This year will be the last year for reporting using the ARES forms. Work has already begun on the build out of ARES Connect, a volunteer management, communications, and reporting system that will allow information to be logged by ARES members and managed through field organization. It does not change how ARES operates when serving a partner entity; it is simply a system that will make managing volunteers and events easier. Beta testing will begin in March 2018. Look for more information about implementation in mid 2018.
